

THE iPhone 3G: CHEAPER, FASTER, SMARTER

The iPhone 3G is expected to sell for around US$199 (about $270), half the price of the original.

Steve Jobs, chief executive officer of Apple Inc., speaks during the Apple Worldwide Developers Conference in San Francisco, on Monday.

It supports 3G or third generation mobile networks, allowing for much faster download speeds.

It supports satellite navigation systems that will help you find your way around or locate a restaurant. It has also beefed up its support for corporate security, scheduling and e-mail systems, with multi-language support.

WHEN WILL IT COME TO SINGAPORE?

SingTel, the first authorised telco to sell the iPhone 3G, says it will be available within the next few months. StarHub and MobileOne are also in discussions with Apple to distribute the device.
