

Existing entrance at Burghley Drive to be closed

A Burghley Drive

Residents were worried that the main entrance of the proposed dormitory will open right on their door-step, less than 10m away. But under the new proposal, the gate facing their driveway will be sealed and the dormitory will be set further back from the street, bringing relief to many.

B Proposed access road

Residents along Tai Hwan Gardens, which include roads like Tai Hwan Heights, Tai Hwan Terrace and Tai Hwan Grove, are worried that the proposed road (below), which will take the workers to and from work daily, will cause noise pollution for those whose homes are 50m away from the new road which is on the other side of the canal.

Tai Hwan Gardens

D Canal

Home-owners in this part of the estate worry that workers may place make-shift plank bridges across the 7m wide canal to gain access to the estate which has a playground and park just five minutes' walk from the canal.

E Tai Hwan Terrace playground

Residents worry that this quiet and serene park and children's playground (below) may be used by workers after work. Even if they are not up to mischief, home-owners there say it will still make them uneasy to see a group of foreigners gathered there.

C Kingsgrove Condominium

The five-storey condominium (left) is closest to the opening to the new slip road on Ang Mo Kio Avenue 1. Residents worry that the buses, which will take the workers to and from work, will add to the traffic of the already busy road.
